

Jurisdictions and Languages that Just Missed Coverage in 2021 Section 203 Determinations (i.e., 7,500-9,999 LEP or 3.9-4.99 percent LEP)

Analysis of U.S. Census Bureau’s December 8th 2021 Section 203 Determinations Public Use Data shows that:

- 105 language groups across 30 states just missed coverage (i.e., jurisdictions that had populations of 7,500-9,999 or 3.9-4.99 percent LEP of a single language group), including four states (Iowa, Maine, Montana, and North Carolina) that do not currently have any Section 203 coverage.¹
- Three states just missed statewide coverage for Spanish language assistance:
 - ❖ New Jersey
 - ❖ New Mexico
 - ❖ New York
- Further breakdown of this analysis shows that 11 Alaska Native American Indian-, 14 Asian-, and 80 Spanish-language jurisdictions just missed coverage.

These jurisdictions and languages are close to meeting the Section 203 threshold and may very well meet the threshold during the next determinations scheduled for 2026. These jurisdictions can, and should, proactively begin to provide some level of language assistance to these language groups before the next determinations. See the language access guides published by Asian Americans Advancing Justice – AAJC, National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials, and The Fair Election Center available at <http://www.naleo.org/languageaccess> for more information about what proactive, voluntary assistance can be provided.
