RE: ORGANIZATIONS CALL FOR DESIGNATION OF TEMPORARY PROTECTED STATUS AND SPECIAL STUDENT RELIEF FOR THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF CONGO

Dear President Biden, Secretary Mayorkas, and Secretary Blinken,

Under the leadership of Congolese community leaders, the undersigned 115 civil rights, immigrant rights, human rights, faith, educational and grassroots organizations write to urge Secretary Mayorkas to review country conditions and designate Temporary Protected Status (TPS) and Special Student Relief (SSR) for the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). Ongoing armed conflict and an escalating humanitarian crisis have garnered the world’s attention as reports of brutal violence grow each day.

The DRC is experiencing one of the deadliest armed conflicts in modern human history. The conflict has spanned over a period of 25 years and caused the death of over five million people and internal displacement of thousands.1 The resurgence of armed conflict between government forces and non-state armed rebel group “Mouvement du 23 mars” or March 23 Movement (M23) has led to the displacement of over 186,000 people since the end of October 2022.2 The recent internally displaced are facing grave atrocities, including gender-based violence as a weapon of war, the killing of civilians, abductions, machete raids, burning of homes, and looting.3 It is some of the worst violence in the region since rebels were chased to neighboring Rwanda in 2013. The insecurity has escalated the humanitarian crisis, as relief efforts are severely hampered by violent attacks, depriving civilians of life-saving aid.4 Failed peace talks and negotiations reflect an emergency that makes the return of Congolese nationals from the United States life-threatening. We believe that the ongoing armed conflict, humanitarian situation, and other extraordinary and temporary conditions in DRC warrant an immediate designation of TPS and SSR. Further, we reiterate the necessity to combat racial disparities in decisions regarding TPS designations for Black and Brown-majority countries that meet the statutory requirements.5

Temporary Protected Status
Temporary Protected Status allows people from a designated country to remain in the United States while conditions in their home country make safe return impossible. The Secretary of Homeland Security can designate a country for TPS if the country is experiencing ongoing armed conflict, natural disaster, or other extraordinary and temporary conditions. TPS allows its beneficiaries to stay in the United States during the designation period and receive work permits. It is life-saving, blanket protection, especially for those who are ineligible for or who have been denied asylum. Hence, TPS is a crucial tool the Biden administration has at its disposal to safeguard vulnerable people in the United States when safe return to their home countries is impossible.

Special Student Relief
Special Student Relief (SSR) by the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) gives international students more flexibility related to their duration of status, course load, and employment eligibility in recognition of emergency circumstances occurring in their home countries. SSR is an option when emergent circumstances occur in a given country—"world events that affect F-1 Students from a particular region and create significant financial hardships, such as but not limited to: natural disasters, wars, and military conflicts."6

Need for designation of Temporary Protected Status for DRC
a. Armed conflict

In November 2022, the armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo took yet another dangerous turn as M23 rebels staged a comeback. As the violence escalates, Kenya's military began sending troops to Congo in support of government forces.7 According to the United Nations, the M23 militia, which emerged following the Rwandan genocide, has been receiving support from the Rwandan government.8 The armed conflict in the last year has resulted in the deaths of over 1600 people.9 Civilians live in fear and are being subjected to rape and sexual violence, war crimes, massacres, abduction, forced recruitment of children, and pillage by state and non-state factors.10 The State of Siege enforced in May 2021 has bolstered security forces to arbitrarily detain civil society leaders, including journalists, students, and human rights defenders, with impunity.\textsuperscript{11} A recent report by the United Nations found that 93\% of registered cases of torture, cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment affecting 4,946 victims were documented in areas affected by armed conflict.\textsuperscript{12} Security forces and armed groups were responsible for the crimes.

Just between October 20, 2022, and November 6, 2022, over 186,000 people have been forced to flee their homes.\textsuperscript{13} In the territory held by M23, an estimated 60,000 people are stuck behind the front line, with calls for a humanitarian corridor for safe passage growing.\textsuperscript{14} A surge of deadly intercommunal violence in the DRC’s western locality of Kwamouth has displaced over 25,000 since July 2022.\textsuperscript{15} In Maï-Ndombe and Kwilu provinces in western DRC, inter-communal violence between the Teke and Yaka ethnic communities has killed nearly 200 people and displaced more than 48,000.\textsuperscript{16} There are 928,957 refugees and asylum seekers from the DRC around the world.\textsuperscript{17}

\section*{b. Other extraordinary and temporary conditions}

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is the world’s most neglected displacement crisis, according to a report by the Norwegian Refugee Council.\textsuperscript{18} It is also among the five poorest nations in the world, with nearly 64 percent of Congolese living on less than $2.15 a day.\textsuperscript{19} An estimated 19.6 million people are in dire need of humanitarian assistance, half of whom are children.\textsuperscript{20} Nearly 27 million people are affected by food insecurity, with 900,000 children acutely malnourished.\textsuperscript{21}

On August 21, 2022, the Ministry of Health announced that a new case of Ebola was detected, a major public health concern in the region.\(^{22}\) The protracted humanitarian crisis has destroyed key infrastructure and state institutions, severely impacting the country’s capacity to recover, prepare and respond to outbreaks. Other outbreaks in the country including cholera, measles, polio, yellow fever, monkeypox, and COVID-19, have overburdened the healthcare system and exhausted available resources.\(^{23}\) Country-wide economic decline has decreased the purchasing power of households, with more than 3 million people in the country’s Greater Kasai region severely food insecure.\(^{24}\)

The United States must designate TPS for the DRC

In the latest refugee admissions report published by Refugee Council USA, DRC topped the list of the top five countries of origin for refugees resettled to the United States.\(^{28}\) Of the top five countries—the DRC, Syria, Sudan, Burma, and Ukraine—the DRC is the only country not designated for Temporary Protected Status.

Despite the acknowledgment of the severity of the country’s conditions, including the armed conflict, violence, and humanitarian crisis, the Biden administration has delayed providing a designation of TPS and SSR for the DRC. In October 2022, the U.S. government issued a level 4 travel advisory warning citizens not to travel to the DRC, citing ongoing armed conflict, humanitarian crisis, and violence against civilians.\(^{29}\) USAID issued a report stating that between 7.5 and 10 million people across the DRC will face severe levels of acute food insecurity through March 2023. According to the Department of State, the exploitation of “conflict minerals” have furthered human rights abuses and is helping fund the conflict.

On the 62nd anniversary of the DRC’s independence, the Biden administration stated that “the United States is committed to furthering our partnership to advance efforts to promote peace, security, prosperity, and human rights in the DRC.” Vice President Kamala Harris has committed to working with the DRC to support stability and peace in the region. TPS and SSR align with the strategic national interest in improving U.S.-Congo relations. By protecting lives and granting work authorization, TPS serves key national and regional security interests, advances moral and strategic U.S. engagement with Africa, and provides other benefits to the United States such as economic growth through increased workforce contributing to the GDP and our communities. It is more important than ever for the administration to use the full breadth of its executive power to provide essential humanitarian protections for Congolese nationals in the United States.

Conclusion
The Democratic Republic of Congo is experiencing ongoing armed conflict and other extraordinary and temporary conditions that make the safe return of Congolese from the United States impossible. As highlighted above, the country conditions in the DRC meet the statutory requirements for a designation of Temporary Protected Status and Special Student Relief. We urge President Biden, Secretary Mayorkas, and other relevant decision-makers in the administration, to review country conditions and immediately designate TPS and SSR for the DRC. We request that an initial designation of 18 months is granted, along with a prompt publication of the Federal Register Notice (FRN), a 180-day registration period for eligible applicants to submit their applications, and a community-driven outreach campaign for awareness about the relief. Congress created TPS as a mechanism to provide humanitarian relief to those who cannot and should not be returned to dangerous conditions, including Black and Brown immigrants. Past designations by the administration have reflected racial bias in the TPS decision-making process. The Biden administration must prioritize equity in the consideration of TPS for the DRC. This request is an opportunity for the United States to exercise its leadership and alleviate the pain of the Congolese people.
